

Photo: It's been 25 years since Tonya landed the Triple Axel at the 1991 U.S. Nationals in Minneapolis, in the process becoming the first American woman (and only the second in the world) to do so in competition. It also resulted in her becoming the national champion that year. This beautiful diorama by Brittany Powell of Portland was created to commemorate the occasion. It currently has pride of place at the THNK1994 museum in New York.

Bowie, Prince, Cohen, Snape, Wonka - all gone,
In their place we have got Trump and Hillary,
Compared to those guys, they're a poor substitute,
I'm sure you will have to agree with me
Forty years on, Punk is now a commodity,
Britain faces the problems of Brexit,
It's enough to drive you all to despair,
But there's no need to rush for the exit
We've still got Tonya to cheer up our Yuletide,
The Establishment's skating Deploable,
Our blonde jumping bean, star of stage, rink and screen,
We, her fans, think she's simply adorable!

Merry Christmas from the
